Diary is Corinne Day's first publication, cataloguing the photographer's life over the past five years. The subjects of this book include friends like Tara-a London commune dweller and fashion stylist-and George and Rose, who after being photographed by Day went on to become catwalk models. Their lives intersect in this book, presenting an honest document of contemporary youth with all their ...

In the second session, we will examine the notion of "Photographic Realism"™ in the fashion photography of Corinne Day and Juergen Teller in the 1990s. We will explore how their work builds upon the casual, intimate ("camera-as-diary"™) aesthetic championed by Nan Goldin and Larry Clark in the 1980s. By discussing issues of voyeurism, and the balance of power between photographer ...
